The weather is changing and the days are growing darker, the end of the first quarter is near. We will be having conferences on October 16 from 2:00 pm to 8:00 pm. Your student will be bringing home signup sheets in the next week or so. It would be great to see everyone on the 16th.

We have finished up our first round of MAP Growth testing and will be communicating soon to parents about the NebraskaREADS policy. There will be a letter coming home to explain the next steps in the process. For some students, the next step is to continue working hard in class. For others, we will create an Individualized Reading Plan to help strengthen and support their reading skills. Once the IRP is created, it will be shared at conferences, or if unable to attend, we will mail them home. Thanks for everything you do to help your child be successful at school.

With the weather change, the mornings are pretty cool, make sure that students are coming with proper outside attire so they can enjoy their time on the playground.

MTSS-MR. ISOM

Multi-Tiered Systems of Supports is a process that the Hemingford Schools are in the early stages of implementing.

MTSS is a framework that promotes an integrated system connecting general education and special education, along with all components of teaching and learning, into a high quality, standards-based instruction and intervention system that is matched to a student's academic, social-emotional and behavior needs.

The NeMTSS Framework is designed to provide an overview for MTSS practices in Nebraska. As such, it will chart the course for school-wide implementation from PreKindergarten through graduation. The framework is devoted to explaining the essential elements of MTSS and the systematic implementation in schools. It is intended to help school leaders to increase his/her understanding of the various aspects of the system and to identify areas that warrant future professional development within his/her school. It is not intended, however, to be a substitute for training. Professional learning, along with ongoing district or ESU level coaching, is required to implement MTSS. Readers are encouraged to pursue supplementary training in each of the elements and processes discussed in this document

MTSS is an essential component of the Continuous Improvement Process and should not be seen as a stand-alone initiative. Local school districts and Educational Service Units (ESUs) are a critical part of the Nebraska MTSS network. Each school district and ESU is charged with multiple improvement efforts, have a variety of local expertise, and possess unique context. Making natural connections between the essential elements of the MTSS framework and other efforts that the school district or ESU are involved with, such as continuous improvement, will be beneficial.

The Nebraska MTSS framework encompasses the concepts of response-to-intervention (RtI), positive behavior interventions and supports (PBIS), and special education eligibility determination. The MTSS framework is an educational system change paradigm (Sansosti & Noltemeyer, Annual 2008; Shores & Chester, 2009) that provides a construct for supporting students and staff as part of school improvement.

The development of an MTSS framework begins by establishing a strong core of literacy, mathematics, and behavior, PreK-12, for all students which provides the foundation of prevention within the entire system. Universal screening processes measuring fluency and accuracy of critical early skills that are predictive of future student skill attainment are used to identify students who may need additional support. Evidence-based interventions are implemented to provide a layered continuum of supports matched to student need. Ongoing progress monitoring data are used to determine student response to intervention and is essential to the data-based problem-solving process to determine next steps for fading, exiting, or intensifying interventions for students. Data from MTSS can be used as part of the process for the identification of students with exceptionalities (See the Special Education Eligibility Determination section of the NeMTSS Framework); however, in no way should MTSS delay the initial evaluation of a student that is suspected of having a disability.
